

Asset Management Policy

SUEZ provides waste, resource recovery and water treatment solutions across Australia and New Zealand that maintain, optimise and secure the resources essential to our future. SUEZ seeks to achieve excellent Asset Management (AM) which is appropriate to enable it to achieve its organizational objectives

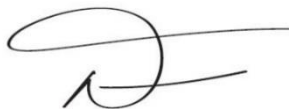

SUEZ is committed to:

- The “life cycle” management of our assets to support achievement of corporate strategic objectives and to deliver the required functions and levels of performance in order to keep production and treatment within regulatory and contractual requirements.
- Managing assets in an environmentally compliant manner, without compromising the health and safety of employees, contractors, the public or the reputation of stakeholders.
- Managing assets in a sustainable manner with an efficient use of resources.
- Complying with all relevant legislation, and other applicable compliance requirements.
- Continual improvement of the asset management system.

In order to achieve this, we will:

- Document, implement and maintain an asset management system aligned to the ISO 550001 international standard as part of our integrated management system which covers the whole life cycle and is easily accessible and responsive to needs.
- Optimize AM through top management leadership and commitment.
- Communicate requirements of the asset management system to all relevant internal and external stakeholders
- Develop asset management improvement strategies, objectives and plans that support the organisational strategic plan
- Adopt a risk-based approach to managing assets, setting priorities appropriate to the identified risks and benefits, consistent with SUEZ’s risk management framework
- Assess asset management processes using clearly defined Key Performance Indicators (KPIs) that add value
- Resource all asset management operations to meet Health, Safety & Environment targets, quality standards, production outputs and other asset management objectives

SUEZ views the management of assets as critical to the delivery of its organisational objectives. Compliance with this Policy is the responsibility of all SUEZ’s employees and contractors.
